Wasting Time

THE avowed purpose of entertainment in this world is to provide recreation, relaxation, and at the same time something constructive. Yet, as we examine the various methods whereby modern youth entertains himself, it is difficult to find one which does not boil down ultimately to sheer waste of time.

Let us make our way to a dance floor. The music fox-trots at perspiration tempo, couples jiggle as if in Brownian movement and bump into one another with annoying frequency. During the intermissions, the dancers pull themselves together for the next foray, at the same time groping about for a topic of conversation. It is hardly the time and place to discuss the latest attempt to break up the ion or to contrast the merits of Dickens and Galsworthy, and unless an individual is full of those bright bits of nonsense which elicit forced laughter, he is hard pressed to prevent the conversation from "going dead." At the end of the evening, as we totter homewards, we wonder, "What did I get out of that which is worth storing in the memory?" Nothing! There was only small talk, the music was merely sounds grouped about the tom-tom of a drum, and the room was depressingly hot.

Then let us join an evening throng flocking like a sea of curious penguins to see and hear the stars of the screen. We sit for two or three hours, for all the world like several hundred Lilliputians, gazing at the efforts of others. As we come out into the fresh air, we very much doubt if any relaxation was afforded during the evening. Producers seem convinced that their pictures must have action, vivid and colorful, in which the audience can participate. Constructively, we might learn a little adulterated history from the screen; or from our neighbour receive a lesson on "How to make love in a theatre." But as an entity, we are little the better for watching others pass across a living stage. We acquire little which tends towards our personal advancement.

Many people insist that there is no better way to spend an evening than playing cards. There is recreation in it, but, if one is a serious player, where is the relaxation? Further, what possible intellectual benefit can be derived from the game? One is no wiser at the end than at the beginning of the game.

But what about hockey, basketball, and other games of sport someone questions? In watching them we obtain reaction and relaxation from intellectual thought. Furthermore we learn to improve our own game by watching the best. This is true, but one cannot relegate to one side the old adage, "Practice makes perfect." We may see hundreds of games, and yet be no more proficient ourselves if we do not participate.

Modern youths are fooling themselves into being amused. Notice how they must reiterate several times how good a dance it was, what a swell party it turned out to be, what an exciting game was played. They are rather doubtful, so they clinch the matter by declaring the excellence of the function to the utmost of their vocal abilities. Notwithstanding, it is not long before that might-have-been-doing-something-better feeling begins to dull the illusion, and the fact is forced home that they have missed real entertainment.

The cure for this "pathetic fallacy," under which youth is existing, is the choice of a hobby. It may be some athletic activity, some intellectual research, or some form of handicraft. It must be something where results can be obtained and definite improvement shown.

In his selection the individual must be guided only by personal desire, and not by that of those around him. Today the tendency is not to create or select a hobby, but to participate willy-nilly in what is advertised as entertainment. Now, before it is too late, is the time to separate from the sheep-like crowd and to choose a hobby that will prevent us from wasting that time set apart for amusement.

PROLOGUE

AND it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face.

For in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken. Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel;

So that the fishes of the sea and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground.

Ezekiel, Chap. 39, verses 18-20.

"WARI" bellowed a hoarse-voiced news boy, "Italy attacks the British Navy! WARI!"

Business men, pouring out of their offices at the end of the day, stopped in amazement, a cold thrill running up their backs. So it had come at last. Excited fathers burst into their homes to be greeted by pale and anxious wives who had already heard the news over the radio. The whole nation sat on tenderhooks waiting for developments. What would happen? Every radio in the land was going full blast, the announcer's voice breaking in every few moments with some curt statement.

"... the mass attack of Italian sea-sleds and submarines has been held off but with considerable loss..." The report has just come through that Germany and Poland have begun an advance into Ukraine... The Russian Government reports thousands of Japanese troops massing on the Manchukuoan border; in fact, hostilities there are already believed to have commenced... In accordance with the Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact, French army officials expect the order to advance on Germany at any minute... It looks like another Armageddon... Turkish troops are pouring into Palestine... The United States' Pacific Fleet has set sail from San Francisco for parts unknown; they sailed in a northwesterly direction...

The airplane carrier, Southampton, lay at anchor at the mouth of the Suez Canal. Around it in the darkness lay the ominous grey shadows of British destroyers. Not a light showed anywhere.

The war had been in progress now a little over a month, during which time many things had happened. Japan had succeeded in driving the Russians back to Lake Balkal; the United States had been unsuccessful in their attack upon Japan and had succumbed to a Communist Revolution which was now keeping them out of the war. Austria and Rumania had succeeded in acquiring the southern section of the Ukraine and were now concentrating with their ally, Turkey, and the help of a few German divisions, on an attempt to conquer the Holy Land. Italy was barely holding her own, while the Franco-German frontier had become practically stationary. The French and British fleets still had control of the Mediterranean, but they were in a very precarious position.

A squadron of scouting planes were preparing for flight on the landing deck of the Southampton. In the distance, the dull booming of cannon could be heard. The squadron leader was speaking to the pilots.

"Now remember, men, this new ray is an extremely powerful thing. The moment that it sprays the air in the vicinity of any explosives, they blow up. Now our job is to fly high over enemy territory, and spreading out in fan shape with about three miles between each plane, proceed to sweep the enemy with the ray. At that height, it will cover a band of territory about half a mile wide. In that way, we'll be sure to get their ammunition dumps. Come on, men, we're going to blow those devils out of existence with their explosives."

The roar of the departing planes gradually subsided in the distance; the ship's officers stood in a group talking in hushed tones. In a few minutes the fate of Britain's Eastern Empire would probably be settled.

A large British bombing plane was returning to Jerusalem from a flight over the enemy territory. Suddenly above the noise of the engines, could be heard a dull, reverberating roar. The heavens became illuminated as if it were day. Looking down, the pilot saw to his amazement huge cracks opening in the earth. He howled at his wireless operator.

"Get in touch with the fleet! Quick! Tell them there's an earthquake starting and that they'd better get further out to sea or they may get stranded." He flew on, looking for the lights of his landing field, but they failed to make their appearance. He decided the earthquake must have put the power plant out of order. He looked at his watch; 4:30 a.m. The gasoline gauge showed the tank to be half full; enough for at least five hours' flying.

"I'm going to keep circling around 'til dawn," he shouted to his crew. "Keep a lookout for any lights. Have you had any answer from the fleet?" he asked the wireless operator.

"No, Sir, there doesn't seem to be anybody on the air at all. Malta is silent and so is Gibraltar."

"Gosh, that earthquake must have been pretty widespread to put all the radio communications out of business," mused the pilot.

As the first flush of dawn broke, they looked down to see a vast expanse of water beneath them. In all directions, as far as they could see, there was no trace of land.

"That's funny," muttered the pilot, "according to my calculations, we should be very close to Jerusalem, but I guess I've got mixed up. We must be miles out over the Mediterranean. See if you can make out where we are?" he called to one of the crew.

There was a moment's pause, during which the men looked at each other anxiously, then:

"According to the instruments, Sir, we are within a few miles of Jerusalem."

Slowly the unbelievable truth dawned upon them; Palestine had sunk beneath the sea. The wireless operator was scribbling a message on his pad.

"Where's it from?" asked one of the men.

"Paris," returned the operator, "they say that the whole of southern France has been engulfed by the ocean, and that North Africa, Spain, Italy, and all Southeastern Europe no longer exist. To what extent the rest of the world has been affected, they can't say. The whole city is in ruins, and they are broadcasting from a temporary field station."

The men stared at him blankly, too dumb-founded even to speak.

Many fathoms under the sea lay the gruesome products of war. Staring with sightless eyes through the window of a gas proof tank was the face of a British soldier—a Christian soldier. Pinned beneath the caterpillar treads was the body of a German soldier—a Christian soldier. In the dim under-water light, their faces seemed to grin mockingly at the devastation around them.

In the early evening, fresh rumblings occurred. Where once had stood the beautiful city of Jerusalem, an angry sea now tossed. The Christian nations, in their refusal to honestly accept the teachings of Christ, had ended by allowing their barbarism to destroy the one material link which they had with Him. The rumblings increased. Suddenly the waters seemed to roll back, and a mass of land leapt into view. It was in the shape of an enormous cross. As darkness fell, it slowly settled back into the sea.

Montreal Orchestra

THERE was a good turnout at His Majesty's yesterday, a sign that people are realizing that the season is nearly over. Even this late in the winter Mr. Clarke saw fit to go to a good deal of trouble preparing two new additions to the repertoire, both well worth it. The first of these opened the concert—Borodin's overture to "Prince Igor," which occupied him off and on for most of his life. The overture makes pleasant concert music, and suits the Orchestra well.

The other addition was a string version of a variation-set by William Byrd, Shakespeare's great contemporary. The tune is essentially a melodic one called "The Carman's Whistle." Changes in accompaniment and time constitute the procedure, sometimes with effective counterpoint. The effect is to vary the mood of the song over a wide range. An attractive acquisition, and very well played.

Some good playing was likewise evident in Bach's fifth Brandenburg concerto. The first movement with its splendid tune was given a zip which was irresistible. The long discourses between the soloists went very smoothly, although the part in the argument of Mr. Ballargone's flute was sometimes too soft for the ear to catch. In the slow movement for the soloists alone the fine flute was heard to best advantage, while Mr. Moisse at the piano and Mr. Oudert's violin turned in some fine work. The audience was unusually pleased.

Mr. Clarke's biggest effort of the day came in the playing of Brahms' fourth and last symphony. It was a grand effort too. Never has Mr. Clarke hit off a climax better than in that coda of the first movement, one of the most compelling tragic climaxes in any music. Under better acoustical conditions the effect would have been complete. The playing of the gorgeous slow movement made an astonishing contrast to the terseness of the scherzo, which was taken at a very high speed. The scherzo can whip one into a state of complete nervousness faster than any work I know. One's rhythmic sense is bombarded from beginning to end, for there are barely half a dozen bars quite free from syncopation. By the time it is over one is ready for anything.

At this point in the writing of his symphony Brahms had exhausted or otherwise aesthetically disqualified all the usual forms which come to mind when the writing of a finale is contemplated. So he recurs to the most primitive of variation styles. With a supreme gesture he pits his skill against the limitations of the Passacaglia, and succeeds in evolving just exactly the contrast and climax which will bring his tragedy to as crushing a finish as possible. The finale is on lines much more spectacular than any mere eight bars repeated again and again. Mr. Clarke reproduced this design with considerable skill, ably supported by every member of the band. We remember the lovely, pathetic variations 12 and 13 for the splendid response of the solo flute, clarinet and oboe. Mr. Clarke can feel pleased with the day.

Movie Review

Cinema de Paris

THIS week "L'Equipage," a fast moving story of the Great War as seen from the clouds is presented. The leading roles are taken by Suzanne Després and Raymond Cordy. This picture presents some of the best European camera work seen in Montreal this season; the pictures of the clouds and the war zone seen from the air are unique and well worth seeing. The second picture on the bill is "Jim la Houlette," which being translated means "Jim the Crook." The picture is just about as good as the name implies, although there are some witty scenes in the court when Jim is apprehended. On the whole the show is well worth seeing as the stories of both films are easy to follow and the excellent photography in "L'Equipage" is in itself admirable.

Palace Theatre

"ROSE MARIE," now playing at the Palace Theatre, is truly an inspiration both musically and pictorially. If anything, the Hollywood version of this now famous operetta is an improvement upon the stage setting. That thoroughly artistic team of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, unforgettable in "Naughty Marietta," again co-star, as Marie de Flor, the temperamental opera singer and Sergeant Bruce of the Canadian Mounties. Their lovely voices blending in the lyrics of Rudolf Friml's stirring melodies is alone worth a visit to this theatre. Minor roles are taken by Reginald Owen, Allan Jones, James Stewart and Alan Mowbray but it is inevitable that they be overshadowed by the illustrious principals.

News, a "Poppy" cartoon, and an aimless Charlie Chase comedy add to the entertainment of the programme.

Loew's Theatre

RUNNING the gamut of all the thrills from the lion in the jungle to an insane monster bellowing in a black marsh in England, "The Great Impersonation" remains, none the less, an unexciting mystery picture that is completely lacking in suspense. Edmund Lowe, of the penetrating eye, is seen as an exiled viceroy's nobleman and agent for a munitions factory during the recent war.

On the stage the show, which includes an accomplished juggler, James Evans, and the well-loved "Cabin Kids" is better than usual. Recumbent on his back, the juggler performs some very pleasing and graceful feats with large gleaming balls which he revolves and tosses in the air with his amazingly skilful feet. The Cabin Kids whom we have already seen in movies, sang several short songs, the treble bird-like quality of which was distorted by the microphone. Nevertheless these five Negro children are so charming to watch that we are able to overlook the raucous strains issuing from the amplifier.

Capitol Theatre

"CEILING ZERO," the latest O'Brien-Cagney romance, is to be recommended if only for the fact that it is a source of never failing interest to see these two character actors talk faster than a French Deputy in a hot debate. This latest opus, however, departs from the usual run, because it presents a credible story with just enough tension and laughs to balance the perennial love-making of James (Sack-em) Cagney.

The second attraction, Freshman Love, or How to Behave in College, sends one home with a profound nostalgia for the good old days at Rutgers. Why isn't college like the movies, professor? Or maybe we shouldn't ask that.

Imperial Theatre

"MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY," appearing at the Imperial until Wednesday, is probably the best sea epic yet produced on the screen. It belongs to that class which is both realistic and vibrant with the feel of the sea and deals of the battle of men against the elements.

The chief roles are played by Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, and Franchot Tone and their acting is up to their usual high standard, although at times Charles Laughton is Charles Laughton rather than Captain Bligh. His personality seems to eclipse the role. Clark Gable and Franchot Tone are perhaps too much like Hollywood and not enough like the solid mutineers.

Correspondence

Dear Sir:

A group of McGill Medical Students have taken it upon themselves to disassociate Medical students from the newly formed McGill Students' Medical Research Society, notice of which appeared in one of the local newspapers. No doubt, they are labouring under severe misapprehensions as to the true function and purpose of the society, which we would hereby like to make clear.

The organizers of this society felt on undertaking this venture, that there was no organization existing at the University which provided pre-medical students with an opportunity of coming together as a group, and discussing matters of common interest, and also to listen to prominent speakers on topics which were in their field of interest. With this in mind, the society was formed, and was greeted with an enthusiastic reception by pre-med students for whom it was intended.

It has also been the basic purpose of the society to organize as a body, which will be continued after the members have entered Medical School, and to conduct organized research on general topics of medical interest.

It has not been our aim to pose as a society composed of Medical Students, and if we have given that im-

Munroe Bourne Stars As Swimmers Win Title

Red Natators Smash Three Intercollegiate Records — Munroe Bourne Breaks 50 Yard Free Style Record — Wins 100 Yard Back Stroke Race — Pete Bourne Breaks Record in 100 Yard Free Style Heat—Wins Final Race — McGill Wins Both Relay Events

LED by the brilliant Munroe Bourne, McGill's swimming team won the Canadian Intercollegiate Championship at Toronto, on Saturday night. No less than three records went by the boards as the McGill contingent completed an impressive evening's performance. The Redmen won five of the eight scheduled events, bringing their point total to 37. Toronto, last year's champions, were the runners-up with 23 points, while McMaster brought up the rear with 10 points.

Munroe Bourne Outstanding

Munroe Bourne, Olympic swimmer, Rhodes Scholar and Track man, made the big difference between the competing colleges. Munroe broke the intercollegiate record for the 50 yard free style, formerly held by Goss of Toronto, in 24 1-5 seconds. He also won the 100 yard back stroke race and was included on the winning relay teams. Pete Bourne retained his 100 yard free style title from last year. In a special heat in this same event Pete smashed the intercollegiate record. His time was 56 1-5 seconds and put the already famous name of Bourne further into prominence.

The next record to be washed away by the red natators was the 300-yard relay event. The McGill team consisted of the three Bourne brothers — Munroe, Pete and Clayton — and Jim Powell. This event had been won last year in record-breaking time by McMaster. McGill were not to be denied and completed the distance in 1 min. 42 1-5 secs., clipping 1 2-5 seconds off last year's time. Toronto edged out McMaster for the second time.

McGill Breaks Record

W. A. McGilly, another famous swimmer, representing Toronto, came into the limelight when he churned through the waters in the 200-yard breast-stroke race ahead of Hughie Savage of McGill. Hughie forced him to break the intercollegiate record to come out in front. McGilly's time was just one second under the former intercollegiate record of 2 minutes and 53 3-5 seconds. The other title won by Varsity also went to McGill. The race was at 440 yards and free style. The closest competition for the Toronto man came from Pete Bourne. Pete wound up in second place and Dean of Varsity was the third swimmer to finish.

McGill gained a victory right off the bat, when they won the 300-yard relay, the first event on the program. The Red team was composed of Munroe and Pete Bourne and Clayton and Hugh Savage. McGill took the lead and kept it to the finish mark ahead of Toronto and McMaster. The only title won by McMaster was in the diving event. J. Ivaniski was the stylist, compiling the greatest point total. McGilly, also of McMaster, garnered second place, while Jimmy Mills added further to McGill's point total by finishing third.

The McGill team completely dominated the meet. With the swimming championship added to the Water Polo title, a new era for McGill swimmers has been inaugurated.

The results: 300-yards medley relay: 1. McGill (H. Savage, F. M. and R. A. Bourne); 2. U. of T.; 3. McMaster. Time: 2:30 2-5.

50-yards free style: 1. F. M. Bourne, McGill; 2. B. Smith, McMaster; 3. D. McWhirter, McMaster. Time: 24 1-5. (New intercollegiate record.)

440-yards free style: 1. W. A. McGilly, Toronto; 2. R. A. Bourne, McGill; 3. W. B. Main, Toronto. Time: 5:40.

100-yards back stroke: 1. F. M. Bourne, McGill; 2. R. N. Dilworth, Toronto; 3. J. Wilson, McGill. Time: 1:10.

100-yards free style: 1. R. A. Bourne, McGill; 2. D. McWhirter, McMaster; 3. L. N. Earl, Toronto. Time: 58 seconds.

300-yards breast stroke: 1. W. A. McGilly, Toronto; 2. H. Savage, McGill; 3. V. P. Collins, Toronto. Time: 2:44 3-5. (New intercollegiate record.)

200-yards relay: 1. McGill (J. Powell, F. M. R. A. and C. C. Bourne); 2. U. of T.; 3. McMaster University. Time: 1:42 1-5. (New intercollegiate record.)

Diving: 1. J. Ivaniski, McMaster; 2. D. McWhirter, McMaster; 3. J. Mills, McGill.

International Ice Group For Colleges Formed In Boston

INTERNATIONAL intercollegiate hockey competition has finally become a fact. After many years of dreaming, college hockey enthusiasts finally reached their goal at Boston on Saturday. Representatives from four Canadian and four American colleges were present at the meeting. Plans were formulated for next year, and a schedule was drawn up.

The schedule will be run off with Canadian and American teams playing separate home-and-home series. Each team will then travel across the border and play the four remaining League teams. Point standing will determine the champions. The same system of scoring as at present in the N.H.L. will prevail.

The Canadian teams in the league are McGill, Toronto, University of Montreal and Queen's. The American representatives are Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth and Princeton. McGill's representative at the meeting, Dr. "Bobby" Bell, will give a full account of the meeting in an exclusive interview with the McGill Daily tomorrow.

GORMLEY PLAYS STAR GAME FOR REDMEN

Grads Play McGill For Dadds Cup on Wednesday

GENE GORMLEY'S final drive to gain league scoring honours just fell short on Saturday night, as McGill Senior cagers trimmed Y.M.H.A., 40-18, in their last M.B.L. game of the season. The mite forward needed 15 points to get the top position over Hammond and Morrison, tied with 89 apiece, in the final standing. But for a slight run-in with Referee Harrison in the first half, he would probably have made it. He was just four points short of the 15 with two minutes to go, but try as he might he could not score. The individual scoring standing is now headed by Hammond, Grads and Morrison, Central Y, 89 each; Gormley, McGill, 86; and Allan, N.D.G., 82.

Dadds Cup Game Wednesday

The win gave McGill 8 points in the final league standing, with four wins and six losses. This is considerably better than the Redmen's performance in the intercollegiate schedule, in which they came off with only one win in six starts. Chief interest now centres in the playoff efforts of McGill Grads. Don Young and his men engage in a two-game series with N.D.G. for the provincial championship, beginning March 11. This Wednesday, the Dadds Cup game for the city championship will take place between McGill and the Grads at the National A.A.A. floor.

Saturday night's game was marked by fast but scrappy play. The Redmen started out with some nice combination work, baskets by Gormley, Ruthenford and Brown putting them ahead. Breunhouse kept the "Y" in the game with a couple of scores to make it 10-6. Bunny Talpis, former McGill star, was playing a nice game as the Blue pivot.

Rutherford Brilliant

Rutherford sank a couple of his characteristic overhead shots in succession followed up by one from Teahan. Play was ragged, with numerous fouls being handed out. Baskets by Boxes and Brown ended the period, with the score 21-10 in favour of McGill.

Breunhouse started a "Y" second period rally with two scores in close succession. Teahan, Gormley and Ruthenford brought the Redmen up once more. Teahan scored again to make it 28-14. The passing combination of Coach van Wagner's men was a treat to watch, and had the North Enders completely baffled.

Gormley Tries Hard

Jackson finally broke away for a "Y" field goal, but Tom Schofield countered with a nice basket. With nine minutes to go, Gormley decided it was high time he began his final drive. Three points were rung up by the Red captain in short order, but more McGill fouls interrupted his efforts. Schofield scored on an unselfish pass from Gormley, who in turn sank one to make it 37-18. A single by Ruthenford and a field goal by Boxes in the final minute made it 40-18 as the gun barked.

The team's fine combination work was equal to any they have shown this season, and gives indications of a much more successful campaign next year. Gormley, Teahan and Brown were all effective on the front rank, while Ruthenford and Boxes played well both on offense and defense.

For Y.M.H.A., Breunhouse was outstanding. Richman and Talpis proved especially hard men to cover. The game, which was played in the M.H.S. Girls' gym, drew a large part of its crowd from the Gymnastic Meet after it had finished in the Boys' gym.

Crosby Nets Four Goals

Both Lines Batter Down Cowell in Queen's Nets — McConnell Accounts for Two — Last Intercollegiate Game Wipes Out Harvard Smudge—Take On Verdun in Play-off Series Wednesday Night

THREE goals in each period gave the Senior Redmen a 9-2 victory over Queen's, Ottawa Senior Group sextette, in a high scoring battle at the Forum Friday night. The result gives McGill a firm grasp on the collegiate crown which waived against the Harvard team a few weeks ago.

Women Hockeyists Swamp Stanstead; Cagers Play Tie

McGill Puck Squad Roll Up Large Score

STANSTEAD GIRLS made a good showing on the basketball floor on their visit to McGill over the week-end but were rather outclassed on the ice. On Friday, Mrs. Amaron led the College basketball squad to a 24-24 draw with the R.V.C. Freshies. No overtime was played.

The Lady Principal played a large part in the game, scoring 16 points herself. The team as a whole showed marked improvement over their last appearance here, three years ago, when the Freshies defeated them by a score of 60-7.

Schnelby Stars

The hockey game at the Arena on Saturday night gave the Red co-eds a real chance to display their ability. Cary Horner started the scoring early in the first period. Ruth Schnelby and Ruth Russell also got counters, and Cary Horner scored again just before the period ended.

Stanstead showed much better form in the second stanza, backed up by a new net custodian in place of the recumbent goalie who started. The large Arena ice surface handicapped the visitors, however, who were again led by Mrs. Amaron. Both teams were playing better as the game progressed, and in the last period the McGill co-eds turned on the heat to make the final score 9-0. Ruth Schnelby, Eleanor Hunter, Ruth Russell, Ann Naran, and even a defenceman, Jean Buchanan, getting goals.

The Teams:

Stanstead: Dorothy Kimball, goal; Ann Pike, Frances Walbridge, defence; Alice Amaron, centre; Anita Laythe, Cora Phillips, forwards. Subs.: Gertrude Brown, Barbara Lamb, Margaret Houston, Betty Gardner.

McGill: Betty Murphy, goal; Peggy Lamb, Jean Buchanan, defence; Cary Horner, Ruth Schnelby, Ruth Russell, forwards. Subs.: Lorayne Strachan, Perleita Dakin, Eleanor Hunter, Ann Naran. Referee: McKeljohn.

Coach Jean-Paul Elie persuaded Gordie McKeljohn that handling the game would give him some good experience. "Mike" showed keen powers of diplomacy at that. The game was witnessed by a small but appreciative audience. Betty Murphy had to play with her shadow to keep warm in the McGill nets. George Hornig and Graham Gould shared the arduous judging duties in the cage behind her. No. Gould went home after the game to catch up on his sleep.

Commerce Juniors Win Hockey Title

Commerce juniors won the interclass hockey championship Friday by defeating Dentistry juniors in the final playoff game of the league, 6-0. Good work on the part of Craig and Brown of the Commerce team, coupled with fine defensive play, won the game for the west wingers. Dinning in the Dentistry nets gave a fine exhibition of goaling, and was the star for his team.

Gym Team Loses Meet To Toronto

Varsity Gymnasts Victors by Four Points Over McGill

INDIVIDUAL CROWN WON BY FARRAR

Beall Heads McGill Team With Third Place

SO near and yet so far! After four years McGill's Gym team came the closest to winning the intercollegiate crown at the M.H.S. gym Saturday night when the Varsity gymnasts retained the title with but a four-point margin. Jack Farrar, U. of T. captain, won the individual championship being over ten points ahead of his team mate, Frank Buck, who came second. Gordie Beall was the first ranking McGill man, coming third about thirty-five points behind Farrar. The final point standing was Toronto 112, McGill 108.

Reds Strong on Parallels

The contestants, five on each team, were judged on their voluntary movements on four different pieces of apparatus, the high bar, the parallel bars, the horse, and the mats. Beall won the competition on the parallels, the department in which the Redmen were strongest. Farrar was first on the horse and mats and Buck took the high bar. The team score was reckoned on a diminishing scale: ten points for first, nine for second, etc.

CONNECTING CONTINENTS.

Europe may soon be directly connected by road and rail with Asia Minor and India. A mile and a half suspension bridge, linking both banks of the Bosphorus forms part of a plan elaborated by the Constantinople municipality. The design and estimates of an Anglo-American concern are especially favored. The bridge will have more than one level. One will be entirely reserved for rail transport, another for road traffic, and a third will be constructed for the exclusive use of pedestrians. The latter will be lined with shops, cafes, restaurants, cinemas and so on. The central part will be suspended over the Bosphorus for a distance of nearly half a mile and will be high enough to allow the largest liner in the world to pass underneath.

London has few buildings more than 100 feet tall. A new law, however, permits construction to a height of 150 feet.

McGill Fencers Will Take Part In Provincial Meet

Four Places on Team Are Vacant

FRESH from their recent victory in the intercollegiate assault-at-arms, McGill fencers are preparing for the forthcoming provincial tournament, which will probably take place in the second week of March. Eight McGill men will enter the meet, Fabbro, Moll, Van Reet, Perrault, and four others who have not yet been selected.

Newcomers to the team will be selected for the provincial meet, so that they may obtain experience. Men who turned out for the practice for newcomers two weeks ago included I. Smith, C. LaRicheliere, E. Leveridge and Graham.

A decided upswing has been noticed in fencing at McGill this year, and membership has increased from a few to over 25. Excellent coaching by M. Blau, and new and better quarters are responsible for the improvement in the club.

Van Reet and Fabbro graduate this year, and their loss will be a blow to the club, but with Perrault and Moll remaining, and several new men showing promise of intercollegiate ability the club should be strong again next year. A meet with Yale is proposed for next winter, and the objective of the team is to win this competition.

Laura Secord Starred In 1936 Red & White Revue

Skits Announced

"Bacchus' Roadhouse," and several minor ones will be presented instead of the somewhat sketchy plots of such shows as "Off Key 1 Sing," "Bad to Verse," and "Thirteenth Night." The production will go by the boards in Mayne Hall, March 11, 12, 13, 14.

The musical numbers of this year's show will be good, if not better, than anything heard in previous years. Among the writers are Mortimer Weinfield, Howard Simpson, Walter Molson, and Iris Armstrong. The numbers will be sung by Elizabeth Conyers, Eileen Johnson, Adele Lortie, Bob Johansen, James Doyle, and James Moore. The orchestra will be led by "Rusty" Davis.

Graduates Represented

For the first time in Revue history, graduates will take a considerable part. A Graduates' Skit will be presented, including such old favourites as Pat Beatts, Chik Parvish, Tiny Webb, and Lorraine Tasker. A graduates' chorus is also included, while Jean Birnie, perennial Revue star, will present a solo dance.

The main role in the show will be taken by Jack Waud, who has been featured in every production of the Red and White Revue of the past five years. This is in the nature of a farewell performance for Waud, as he graduates from the Faculty of Music this spring.

Partial Cast

A partial list of the cast in the "Laura Secord" skit is as follows: Phoebe..... How Now, Brown Cow Laura Secord..... Bernice Ashkanase General Wolfe..... Jack Waud Major St. John New Brunswick..... ## Jotcham, Reid Gave

Christ, the second out of Him. "We often hear," he remarked, "that the old world is getting better." He followed this idea through, showing the advance scientifically and socially, although accompanied by a corresponding decline morally and spiritually. Speaking of the Greeks, he showed how they reached the highest intellectual heights but sank to the lowest moral depths. He discredited the social advance in his consideration of the history of war. In conclusion, he said, that all these fallacies were traced back to the false idea that we can follow Christ without accepting his doctrines.

Last night the Fellowship conducted the service at Madison Baptist Church. Stewart Reid, Arts '38, preached, basing his sermon on Philipians 3:13-14. He showed how we cannot understand all things, but that a definite act of faith is required. Finite cannot expect to understand the Infinite; man does not comprehend the whole plan of God, but can accept it by faith. He maintained that Christianity offers an asylum for troubles, sorrows, and sin, enabling one to forget what lies behind. In addition, he presented the rewards offered to the Christian for faithful service. Others taking part were: W. H. Heuzan, N. Holland, G. Eastwood, and A. G. Weaver.

Traveller Discusses

reduced. The German people as a whole are favourably inclined towards the nationalistic program of the Government, but a very large percentage are against anti-Semitism.

Misery in Poland

From Germany the speaker travelled to Poland, and there met conditions of appalling misery. As high as 53-1-3 percent of Poland's Jewry live on charity supplied by outside countries. In 1933, $30,000,000 was collected to relieve their distress, $18,000,000 coming from the United States, and $8,000,000 from Canada. This shows the precariousness of the situation, when so much money is needed for relief purposes.

The reason for the unstable conditions, Paul believed, is the results of wars, and the inexperience of the country's leaders since the creation of the Polish Republic, and the general lack of sagacity on the part of the average Pole. As in Germany, the condition is hopeless; distress is unprecedented. Eighty percent of Poland's population are engaged in agriculture, and the recent moratorium on farm debts declared by the Government, has increased the misery of the Jews, most of whom are commercial men. Between 1927 and 1932, 1,150 Jews committed suicide in Warsaw alone.

Cannot Govern Itself

Poland cannot govern itself, declared the speaker, and that is the root of the problem. He predicted that another catastrophe such as a world war or a revolution will result in its breakup. Eighty percent of its population pay no taxes whatever, the burden thus being borne by a small number; and added to this, there is a great expenditure to maintain the large Polish army. The only hope is in lessening the military budget. The government of Poland, like that of Germany, depends upon the ability of the people to bear privation.

The National Socialist party of Poland, like its German prototype, in order to blame the existing conditions on a group which is defenseless, loudly declares that the Jews are the cause of the country's ills. The situation is bad on college campuses, and Jews are excluded from the civil service. As a result, 50,000 Jews leave Poland annually.

Situation in Moscow

In Moscow, the German lineup is repeated, but instead of before food stores, takes place before newspaper stands, for the average Russian is demanding more and more reading matter. It is hard to murder the Russian, and conditions are bearable. The Government invites criticism, asserted the speaker, thus advancing life in the Soviet. Most of the people work for the government. As an amusing example of this, upon tipping a porter in a Moscow railway station, the speaker was handed a receipt, for, as the porter explained, "I work for the Government." Nationality in Russia has not been obliterated, but very little religion exists there.

Romance Bared

her old friend and repelled the advances of the Passionate Prince, this Byronic Brave who would wed her. Laura Secord was an astute woman, she squaw through him and his ways. This was a bitter blow for Whis-Kee-Ke, a veritable herbal tonic to his passions, but he had to swallow his own medicine and like it.

But this was not to be for long. The Chief, also known as the Big Gun, knew a couple guys at City Hall. Furthermore, these men had no Reservations. The long and short of it was that these men passed a law that proved fatal to the Damon (and Runyon) friendship between Laura and Phoebe. They decided that since Phoebe did not belong to the Union of Mammalian Bovine Herbivorous Quadruplets, Local 27A, she could no longer purvey or dispense her favours on her mistresses.

Woeful News

Laura tried to keep the woeful news from Phoebe, and she succeeded for a time, but one fateful day the little brown cow got hold of a scandal-mongering journal, and read the whole story in big black headlines.

CANDY QUEEN JILTS FIRST LOVE TO FEATHER. BIG BRAVES NEST. Phoebe couldn't believe it at first, but at last the dire truth penetrated, and sored her forever. The stricken brown cow had nothing more in life to live for, so she wandered off into the woods to die. And there she was found four days later by her remorseful mistress, frozen to death, and all that was left of Phoebe the Cow was an ice-cream brick, the last tragic memento of her great love.

So now when you calmly order a big steak, rare, and smothered in onions and gravy, think twice before eating it and remember that some forlorn cow died so that you might live... and love. Phoebe died that her name might live as an example to all cows. She died for milk's sake.

Dear Sir,

May I ask for a small portion of your valuable space in order to modify an impression which I find has been produced by the report of my speech at the Royal Victoria College Buffet Supper on Thursday night? It is not an unusual experience to find that that printed report of one's spoken words has somewhat shifted emphasis which one had intended, and I should not have thought of correcting the notice in the Daily of Friday if I had not been approached by the representative of a city daily, looking for some confirmation of what he had read.

You will recall that the occasion was that of a gathering of women students and that I was speaking to them intimately, as I should not have done to a mixed public. I quoted some of Dr. Leacock's words about the standards of work which governed his College generation and mine, and pointed out that things were very different nowadays. I then sounded a note of warning and told the women students that they must be prepared to deal with a note of criticism, not infrequently heard, to the effect that since women had invaded the universities the standards of work and seriousness had gone down. I did not say that this was my own opinion, and I pointed out that there must be some serious work done at McGill by women students since the most coveted scholarship offered by the Canadian Federation of University Women, and perhaps they saw me the Sunday I was given a ticket to the Montreal Orchestra.

No matter what the motive, a joke's a joke—but there is a time to call the funniest joke off. Withdrawing from such an election means more to me than may appear at first. One New Year's Eve, while up north, I found myself leading an 'Alouette,' and ever since then I have had a secret longing to take a lead in things musical. But the thought of standing before an audience and waving a stick at a band the next time the Musical Association holds a concert makes me quaver and, believing that discretion is the better part of valour, I have withdrawn. I feel that the Musical Association will be capably led by Mr. Boyd, President of the Glee Club, and one who has shown a great interest in things musical at McGill.

While appearing in print (if the Daily doesn't discriminate against me), I would like to state that I think the Musical Association needs to be 'jazzed up.' The Undergraduates have shown too little interest in this art. I venture to suggest that the Musical Association approach the Incoming Union House Committee with a view to obtaining the use of the Union Athletic. If they had this they could call it a 'ball lot' in the morning and broadcast over a national network, like the U. S. Navy Band; and in the afternoon make a German Beer Garden where the students could come and hear a real German Band.

If this plan is carried out I believe that the Association could make enough money to finance a trip or two for the Glee Club, and in good times enough to carry the whole Council—in fact we would soon be reducing the Council Fee by three dollars instead of increasing it.

Yours musically,

JOHN H. McDONALD,
(Maestro).

Possible Solution Of World Problems In Communism Debated

though superficially conditions are not good, if we consider the steady rise in standards of living since the turn of the century, we see that the situation is probably only temporary and that the problem will eventually be solved. However, Communism is not the answer, for the substitute of a desire for the common good in place of a desire for betterment of himself would inevitably result in decreased efficiency of the worker.
